5 | Left, top and bottom: Dressing tables are so in style. It's nice to be able to sit in comfort for putting on a face. In this powder room travertine was used for a built-in vanity (with an acrylic stool) and limestone was used for the floor. The sink has the trendy matte-look of etched stainless-steel and pewter fixtures.

6 | Above: This powder room was turned into a swirled Gustav Klimt fantasy with murals by Martha Channer.

"Powder rooms are important spaces. I like to add as much detail and as many embellishments as possible for visual interest." — Robbie Harbert Maynard, ASID
