Bringing the outdoors in is the theme for this cozy suite of three rooms that makes up the South Wing. Suzanne and I have incorporated numerous custom creations made from natural elements into our design plan: real leaves and branches, pottery, natural stone and drift wood, an eco art installation, a water feature, a grass-look carpet, and more. Each element has been carefully selected to be reminiscent of the peace, harmony, and joy found in nature.

Our commitment to supporting the local economy is reflected in the art and custom design creations throughout the three rooms. We have consistently chosen our ready-made resources, both new and vintage, from local businesses as well. Sustainable art, design, and local trade is what we are all about.

Special thanks to our team of artisans, artists, and sculptors that have contributed such beautiful paintings, unique furniture and lighting pieces, custom cabinetry, and one-of-kind pottery. We would also like to thank our retail vendors for their support and their generous contributions of accessories, furniture, and special order carpets. What a wonderful and productive design community to be a part of!

This inner space engages all of the senses in both reverent and celebratory ways. My designs often speak to a sense of place: how place affects us and how we affect it. Within the wine cellar, I have juxtaposed our inner world and the outer environment with a balanced vision. Sophistication and designed simplicity enriches the experience.

The arc of the rocky ceiling vault is reflected in the subtle curvature of the large plank wine tasting table, which is crafted from tough hickory and finished to a soft satin glow. The kiln-fired glass insert is done in topographic detail, while the old-world distressed finish is combined with the contemporary American realism of welded steel capped and softened by wood.

The "Terroir" console table made of cast bronze cane and vine, holds a kiln-fired glass top in the Sonoma County "viticultural embrace" that we all know and love. Abstract painting by artist Martha Channer, further personalizes the décor, engaging the imagination in intimate dialogue.

Wine displays donated by local wineries — from the micro-styled vintages of Graton Ridge cellars, to the larger production styles of Chateau St.Jean — invite your exploration. Where's my cork screw?...let's break out our best goblets!
